Preparing for Contact

When global humanity finally acknowledges the existence of more advanced extraterrestrial civilizations and officially makes contact, what will it look like? How will contact with advanced civilizations impact our society in terms of government and politics, religion, education, and other aspects of our civilization? Many of our modern-day institutions have been active and have practiced similar methods for centuries, yet it only acknowledges life on planet Earth and nothing beyond it. It is essential that as many people are mentally prepared for contact with extraterrestrial civilizations as possible. In fact, many civilians have been directly contacted by advanced races, such as George Adamski in the 1950s, who publicly revealed photos of UFOs and his interactions with the ‘Space Brothers’ⁱ.

No matter the aspects of society, open contact with ET civilizations will certainly have a profound impact on our daily lives. According to World Population Review, the four largest religions in the world as of 2020 are Christianity (2.38 billion), Islam (1.91 billion), Hinduism (1.16 billion), and Buddhism (507 million), which combine for approximately six billion followers worldwide.ⁱⁱ Thus, when the day arrives to openly acknowledge the extraterrestrial presence, humans will certainly have strong reactions which may include outright denial, open acceptance, or validation by those who have suspected ET life has been with us all along. Will these religions evolve or dissolve?

Extraterrestrials Exist

In December 2020, former head of the Israel Defense Ministry’s space directorate Haim Eshed publicly stated in a groundbreaking interview that extraterrestrials exist.ⁱⁱⁱ Haim Eshed formerly served as Israel’s space security chief and oversaw numerous Israel satellites launched into space. Eshed claims that he is reaching out now because people’s attitudes are changing and are becoming more receptive to the possibility of ET life. Since Eshed worked a predominant position in the Israeli Defense Ministry and most likely had access to critical information. His words carry tremendous weight regarding extraterrestrial life and its implications in regard to humanity.

Additionally, Eshed spoke about former US President Donald Trump who is aware of the existence of extraterrestrials and had been on the verge of revealing their existence to the public. However, Eshed claims that former President Trump was asked not to reveal the ETs, who are a part of a ‘Galactic Federation’, because it would create mass hysteria on Earth. In addition, the Unidentified Flying Objects (UFOs) have been asked not to be published yet because humanity is not ready. Hence, the world is still experiencing elements from the COVID-19 pandemic, therefore the temperament of humankind may not be ready to openly accept the existence of aliens.

Eisenhower and the Majestic-12

The Eisenhower administration during the 1950s was a critical point of contact with advanced civilizations. Early in his presidency, Dwight Eisenhower tasked Nelson Rockefeller, who served many roles with the US Government,^{iv} with the restructuring of the government itself, which included the secrecy and existence of ET life.^v Additionally, on September 24, 1947, President Harry Truman signed a memo to the Secretary of Defense James Forrestal to create “Operation Majestic Twelve”. The memo said:

Dear, Secretary Forrestal,

As per our recent conversation on this matter, you are hereby authorized to proceed with all due speed and caution upon your undertaking. Hereafter this matter shall be referred to only as Operation Majestic Twelve.”^{vi}

Aired at the Citizen Hearing on UFO Disclosure (now a downed link)^{vii}. In May of 2013, a 77-year old retired CIA agent, who also worked on Project Bluebook, revealed in a video testimony that President Eisenhower expressed his lack of knowledge in regards to what was happening at S-4 because he found himself out of the loop in regards to anything UFO related, as MJ-12, who acted as a control group, had hijacked intelligence to S-4 located at Area 51 in Nevada.^{viii} Eisenhower threatened to invade S-4 if the information he was not given access to the information that he requested. According to the agent, Eisenhower in 1958 said:

We called the people in from MJ-12, from Area 51 and S-4, but they told us that the government had no jurisdiction over what they were doing.... I want you and your boss to fly out there. I want you to give them a personal message.... I want you to tell them, whoever is in charge, I want you to tell them that they have this coming week to get into Washington and to report to me. And if they don’t, I’m going to get the First Army from Colorado.^{ix}

President Eisenhower was mostly cut off from the UFO phenomena despite being the Commander in Chief. In his final address to the nation on January 17, 1961, Eisenhower warned the threat that the Military Industrial Complex posed to the nation:

In the councils of government, we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex. The potential for the disastrous rise of misplaced power exists and will persist. We must never let the weight of this combination endanger our liberties or democratic processes. We should take nothing for granted. Only an alert and knowledgeable citizenry can compel the proper meshing of the huge industrial and military machinery of defense with our peaceful methods and goals, so that security and liberty may prosper together. ^x

Eisenhower's final speech foreshadowed decades of secrecy that persists to the present day. And unfortunately for President Elect John F. Kennedy, the trend of MJ-12 controlling the UFO picture continued. Eisenhower did brief Kennedy privately about the trouble MJ-12 caused him and how they cut him out of the loop. It is believed that Kennedy's push for disclosure ultimately led to his assassination.

The Artemis Accords

NASA's Artemis Accords was signed on October 13, 2020, by Australia, Canada, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, United Arab Emirates, and the United Kingdom ^{xi}. The primary goal of the Artemis Accords is to establish a multinational space coalition that would support human missions to the moon, asteroids, and one day to Mars ^{xii}. Furthermore, it is very likely that one day NASA and the signatories will encounter and disclose their interactions with ET civilizations. Section 4 of the Accords is titled 'Transparency' and it states:

The Signatories plan to share scientific information resulting from their activities pursuant to these Accords with the public and the international scientific community on a good-faith basis, and consistent with Article XI of the Outer Space Treaty.

The phrase "good-faith basis" is expressed and reflects sharing information with humankind and the international scientific community. Additionally, sharing new information with the public may come as a shock to many as artifacts found in space will not be of our human origin.

It has been proved that NASA has tampered with images from Apollo 11 and other missions to the moon. In Richard Hoagland's and Mike Bara's book "Dark Mission: The Secret History of NASA, the two authors review evidence that NASA 'clandestinely confirmed' and covered up, "a once-extraordinary, solar-system-wide, ancient technological civilization on the Moon – precisely as Brookings (Report) had predicted.^{xiii} The Moon was described as having 'extraordinary' "glass-like structures, and "The Apollo crews would also bring back to NASA laboratories not just rocks, but actual samples of the ancient technologies they found.

Apollo 11 Moon Landing

During the July 1969 Apollo 11 moon landing, the general public was left out of the loop of NASA's incredible discoveries. No "extraterrestrial archaeology" was disclosed to the public, which revealed by Bara and Hoagland included glass-like structures, structures that took the form of equilateral triangles, or any of the crystal towers including "the Shard" or obelisks that resemble The Washington Monument in America's capital– instead NASA would say structures or craters are "a trick of light and shadow," and NASA frequently airbrushes artifacts or edits out any otherworldly elements, such as flying saucers, to enforce secrecy.

Hopefully with help from the Artemis Accords, these past ancient extraterrestrial discoveries will one day be released to the scientific community and to the mass public.

In his 2016 book, Ascension Mysteries, David Wilcock highlights the Egyptian style obelisks on the moon and their resemblance to what we see here on Earth such as The Washington Monument mentioned above. According to Wilcock, multiple insiders have confirmed that the glass obelisks are made out of a clear glass-like material.^{xiv} This was a part of his insider, Bruce's, "authorized disclosure." Additionally, this transparent aluminum alloy was leaked into the film Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home. In a November 2015 article on Ubergizmo, the author discusses the advantage of the transparent aluminum:

"The advantage is it's so much tougher, stronger, and harder than glass. It provides better protection in more hostile environments – so it can withstand sand and rain erosion".^{xv}

Furthermore, Wilcock cites authors from Total Security Solutions discussing that the transparent aluminum armor can be produced, "In virtually any shape and can also hold up to the elements better than traditional bullet proof glass."^{xvi}

Additionally, consumers can adopt this type of aluminum for their smart phones and watches when the cost comes down. Lastly, it weighs very little and would not collapse under its own weight and structure. This soft disclosure highlights that high caliber protective glass can hold up on the moon in harsh environments, hence adding the “how can” aspect of humans having a colony off-world.

NASA’s Lunar Orbiter 2 captured images of the shadows of these monuments on the moon in 1966.^{xvii} In a Los Angeles Times article from February 1, 1967, Boeing archaeologist William Blair was quoted saying:

“If such a complex of structures were photographed on earth, the archeologist’s first order of business would be to inspect and excavate test trenches and thus validate whether the prospective site has archeological significance.”^{xviii}

Space Force

On February 19, 2019, President Donald Trump released Space Policy Directive-4 which established America’s Space Force.^{xix} The Space Policy Directive introduction reads:

Space is integral to our way of life, our national security, and modern warfare. Although United States space systems have historically maintained a technological advantage over those of our potential adversaries, those potential adversaries are now advancing their space capabilities and actively developing ways to deny our use of space in a crisis or conflict. It is imperative that the United States adapt its national security organizations, policies, doctrine, and capabilities to deter aggression and protect our interests. Toward that end, the Department of Defense shall take actions under existing authority to marshal its space resources to deter and counter threats in space, and to develop a legislative proposal to establish a United States Space Force as a sixth branch of the United States Armed Forces within the Department of the Air Force. This is an important step toward a future military department for space. Under this proposal, the United States Space Force would be authorized to organize, train, and equip military space forces of the United States to ensure unfettered access to, and freedom to operate in, space, and to provide vital capabilities to joint and coalition forces in peacetime and across the spectrum of conflict.^{xx}

Section 2 defined the “United States Space Force” (USSF) as the newest branch of the military that will start under the umbrella of the United States Air Force. In comparison, the modern Air Force was established under the National Security Act 1947. The Act merged the Department of the Army, Department of the Navy, and The Department of the Air Force into the National Military Establishment (NME).^{xxi} Hence, The Air Force was now primed to operate independently. Similarly, the Space Force will transition onto its own accord like the Air Force did in 1947.

President Trump later signed the National Defense Authorization Act on December 19, 2019.^{xxii} During a Pentagon briefing, Air Force Secretary Barbara Barrett stated that all members of the Air Force Space Command amalgamate into the Space Force. Trump admitted that space is the newest “war fighting domain” and that American domination and superiority in space is vital to the United States’ national security. The establishment of the Space Force and admission that space is a war fighting domain will certainly raise questions of who the United States is fighting? And why? Finally, where did all the advanced technology come from? This will be a shock to many once the Navy hands over all of its incredible space technology to the Space Force.

Thanks to the testimony of William M. Thompkins as discussed in his posthumous books Selected by Extraterrestrials Volume 1 and Volume 2: My life in the top-secret world of UFOs, Think Tanks and Nordic Secretaries, we have a greater understanding of the development of many the Navy’s space assets.

During the 1950s, Thompkins was tasked with helping the Navy develop bases and planetary stations on the moon. In addition, he would receive ‘downloads’ on how to construct projects on how to help man reach the moon. Thompkins also references the Navy combating alien battle groups:

“During the same time-frame that we are designing massive starships to combat the hostile alien battle groups, we were trying to figure out the technical method of shooting a bullet at a bullet.”^{xxiii}

Donald Trump’s reference to space as a “war fighting domain”. And to reiterate, the February 19, 2019, Space Policy Directive-4 says, “Space is integral to our way of life, our national security, and modern warfare.” This strongly aligns with Thompkins’s testimony in his first book that space is indeed a war-fighting domain.

Additionally, in Selected by Extraterrestrials Volume 2, Thompkins discusses his first-hand eyewitness account from a private studio in Los Angeles of the 1969 Apollo 11 Moon Landing.

It was from this studio that he witnessed Neil Armstrong and the astronauts first set foot on the surface donning Masonic aprons. This moment was not witnessed by the public. Descending from the LEM (Lunar Excursion Module), the astronauts placed a Masonic plaque on the surface and claimed it for the Freemasons. Upon returning to the vessel, the astronauts then took off their aprons, went back out, and planted the American flag on the moon, which was witnessed by the public.

Additionally, what was not heard by the public was Armstrong shouting, “They are huge, Sir!” when referencing to the ships nearby watching the astronaut’s every move. ‘Technical difficulties’ interrupted the live broadcast of the moon, and according to Thompkins:

They were told by the ETs that humans were not welcome on the Moon, but that they could continue with future planned landings, however, they were not to return after that. And that’s why we didn’t return to the moon.^{xxiv}

Imagine the public reaction had the ET broadcast had not been censored and edited out.

Impact and Aftermath in a Post-Disclosure World: Conclusion

Our daily routine of society would certainly change once ETs and their advanced technologies reach the public domain. If I was offered a job to help society deal with disclosure and its implications, I would immediately resign from my job if this task was offered by a local or state government. I feel this is likely for many of us who have interest and are already skilled within research and experience regarding extraterrestrials or military experience with ETs because we can approach it from multiple perspectives and can work together. I also want to include people within the healing community who are versed in the healing arts, who have been contacted in the physical or non-physical by benevolent ETs.

Further, the shadow government, like MJ-12 that was established decades ago, will have to be exposed and overthrown. Thus, we can reboot and re-size the government, and focus on the needs of the many, and not on the needs of the few.

Additionally, there is going to be floods of information about ETs once it begins to get through the right channels, and there is going to be a need for individuals to sift through the truthful and non-truthful information. Arriving at this point, society should seek out the researchers who are experienced and well-versed in this arena.

Next, we are going to have to reeducate the population, and this is going to take place in small groups or local communities, and then we can move to the national stage. As of this writing, I am a special education teacher, and I would advise that we break it to people lightly. We must start from a peaceful approach and shake off the programming that all ETs are malevolent and cruel because that is not true. There is decades of testimony supporting benevolent ETs.

We have to treat people as if they know next to nothing about ET life. Transferrable methods in teaching can assist people in understanding ET culture and all related components. I believe we can use KWL charts, the 5 W's and an H, then show people images, play audio, video, and then one day set up the physical contact. I advise that we really go back to basics and start over. This will essentially be a rebuilding. Regardless of race, ethnicity, gender, etc., individuals taking the lead in the new society may be looked at as the contemporary "Founding Fathers of the Rebuilding". We can eliminate society's typical science and social studies classes, and create educational classes based on humanity's true origins and history. Introducing new literature and math that will serve more of a purpose in society. For the approximate six billion people following the four major religions of Christianity, Islam, Hinduism, and Buddhism, how will they react as the foundations of their beliefs are shaken at their cores?

Ultimately, aliens and technology are going to be brand new, and we do not currently have the resources capable of handling the social, emotional, and mental aspects of disclosure and its impact on civilian psyche. With all due respect to the doctors (educational, medical, philosophical, etc.) and those with master's degrees in most fields, they will no longer carry value and be able to provide society with needs, as they have been lied to their whole lives as well. Instead, people will flood the websites of researchers equipped with years of research and knowledge to help cushion the blow delivered by disclosure of ET life. People will seek the truth about Space Force, Majestic-12, NASA, the moon landings, and the life and testimonies of those such as Haim Eshed, George Adamski, William Thompkins, and countless others will be looked at as fact and included in exopolitical conversations. With disclosure, it is certain that exopolitics will become a dominant area of interest for millions of people.

Humanity will receive disclosure, and however that may be, it is apparent that in time secrecy will become transparency, and humans will be forced to work together to build a new world that includes the acknowledgement, acceptance, and implementation of extraterrestrial life and technologies.
